- 37 percent of US workers telecommute. This number will continue to grow, because companies that support remote work styles have an easier time attracting and retaining talent, no matter where employees live.
- With the right technology, people can achieve the same level of engagement whether working inside or outside the office—without compromising security.
- But, from permanent remote workers to frequent travelers, employee needs differ.

Read the eBook to learn the challenges remote workers face and the best ways to alleviate them, so you can ensure your teams have the connectivity and flexibility necessary to succeed.
